Nancy and Peter Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

BY FLORENCE LA GANKE.

ON SUNDAY, November 3, Nancy and Peter were celebrating their third wedding anniversary. Nancy had looked up the anniversary and found that it was "leather." She could not imagine any kind of celebration with leather as the motif. Then, too, the Pages would soon be moving into their new home, and they were saving their entertaining for their housewarming and similar occasions. So they decided against a friendly gathering.

But Peter and Nancy did their own celebrating. Peter bought tickets for a good play. They were to go downtown for dinner in the most festive restaurant they could find. Then the play and then a supper afterward, if they were not too tired.

In addition each one had selected a gift for the other. Nancy's gift to Peter was a bill fold of genuine pigskin. It was made to hold the new bills and was so well made that it lay flat without any bulging or bulkiness. That is the kind of a bill fold a man likes, Nancy had discovered. But she hoped that Peter had enough money to cause the bill fold to bulge in the right way.

His gift to her was not leather, although he looked at leather hand bags. She needed a new bag for evening, and the festive occasion seemed as good as any to provide it. He chose a beautifully plain seeded pearl bag. He was torn between that and a bag of coral beaded quite like the seed pearl. There was one of petit point, another of Beauvais and a flat envelope of brocade. He refused to look at any bag with fringe. He had heard Nancy say too many times that she would not carry a fringed evening bag. Nancy said the coral would have been nice but not as easy to use with many colored gowns. She heartily approved his choice of seed pearls.

When hanging skirts and trousers to dry they should be pinned firmly to the line at the waistband. This makes the outline lengthen.
