What would you advise to coax the wave when I want to look particularly chic and well groomed? Would you savise a finger wave or what would you suggest for the ends of the hair that seem to cause all the trouble?

My hair is dark brown, and my scalp is in a healthy condition. I use your method of shampooing and dry between warm towels. My natrdresser told me that she uses it regularly, as well as the special rinses ou have given from time to time. Would you advise me to have a permanent wave? My hairdresser advice?

ANSWER-It is nathgal for hair to look its best one day and the next day-just when one wants it to look pretty-to give trouble. This tendency is very noticeable with naturally wavy or curly hair. The weather, one's moods and general health. as well as local care, are usually responsible for this variability.

Brush your hair well massage the scalp thoroughly. After the shampoo, add one tablespoonful of olive oil or mineral oil to one quart of water, and use as a final rinse if your hair is apt to be dry and unruly after washing. Have a finger wave after the shampoo.

When you want your hair to look very pretty, just hold your hair over steaming water for several seconds. heat it through, but do not burn the face. Arrange into waves and curl is of black marble and bronze,

The window treatment consists of white Venetian blinds (and, by the way, these were used in nearly every house at the Century of Progress) and hangings of yellow linen, made floor length, with a smartly

(but plainly) draped valance, The two-seated sofa at the left of the fireplace has a covering of medium blue homespun, the seams being finished with yellow moss edging instead of the usual piping.

At the right of the fireplace is an easy chair covered in yellow ground linen with blue predominating in the design. The chair at the extreme left is covered in blue and yellow striped satin, and at the right just beyond the large circular desk table is a chair covered in white leather.

White accessories in the way of lamp bases and figurines, distribute this note throughout the room in balanced effect and the interior of the built-in book-shelves are finished in blue (deeper than the ceiling).

In the sloove at the upper left is shown the dining bay, the back-ground of this matching that of the living room.

Don't you see many ideas in this room which you would like to make a note of just in case you wish to refurnish soon?
