

DETROIT'S DAY AT HOME SHOW

City Officials, Including Mayor,
To Be Guests of Exposition
Management.

"Detroit Day," in the past years of the Better Homes and Better Foods shows, always the gala day of these annual events, is expected to bring today to Convention Hall, where now the combined exhibitions are in progress, a select body of visitors from Metropolitan Detroit.

For the third time since its opening, the exposition is to be visited by Mayor Murphy at the head of a group of City officials which is to include the members of the Council. Groups of public officials from the communities of the Metropolitan area are to join the Detroit group in its tour of the 300 exhibits of the show, according to Charles J. Prost, manager of the builders' exposition. The entire board of directors of the Detroit Builders' Exhibition, Inc., sponsors of the Better Homes show, together with William J. Cusick, manager of the food show, will make up the reception committee.

There are only three days left before the close of the exhibition at 11 p. m. next Sunday. Its closing will also mark the closing to the public of the 1931 Ideal Home, 9357 Piedmont avenue, which up to today has been visited by more than 130,000 persons.
